

DISFIGUREMENT

There is no visible disfigurement on this patient.

(or)

There is a 1mm by 14mm scar on this patient's right forehead as a result of the abrasion and cut she received in this accident.

(or)

The patient now has a disfigurement of the left upper front tooth, in that she no longer has a normal healthy tooth, but a damaged tooth repaired by composite. Although the dentist did a good job matching the color, composites tend to last only a few years and, especially on the front teeth, come off when biting certain foods. Each time this happens, the patient will again have the very visible chipped front tooth for a period of time until she can get to the dentist and have it repaired again.